

Reactions from AAA eNewsbrief January 2022

1- Melanie and members, SI Tokyo-Shinjuku

Dear Ruth,

A Happy New Year 2022 and many thanks for the very thought-provoking AAA January eNewsBrief. It is fitting at the beginning of the year to discuss the quality and kinds of intelligence that are working in human lives to renew and refresh our experience of the world.

Presenting psychologically-designated intelligence categories—Intelligence Quotient (IQ), Emotional Quotient (EQ), Social Quotient (SQ), Adversity Quotient (AQ)—and the African perception of intelligence—children gradually trained in their culture and gender roles by doing many tasks to become competent in their family and community, and to rely upon themselves—shows how these kind of intelligences benefit each other in a complete and well-rounded education.

The more each type of intelligence is developed and interwoven, the stronger the individual will be and the greater their contribution to society. It is extremely heartening to know that AAA nourishes every type of intelligence, strengthening the young people it influences.

Thank you always for your efforts, Ruth, and may 2022 find AAA ever increasing preparation for children's 'road ahead', carrying them on incredible and beneficial journeys.

Best,
Melanie and members,
SI Tokyo-Shinjuku